Dayton Author Pens First in Futuristic Thriller Book Series

Book Free to Local Readers and Subscribers in Exchange for Amazon Reviews

DAYTON, Ohio — Ever dream of being an international bestselling author like Dan Brown? Centerville resident and author Christine Horner does. Horner's first novel, Attribution, set in 2036 about a blacklisted journalist in a race against time to expose the greatest coup ever attempted will debut October 3, 2017 in hardcover and trade paperback. The ebook version of the techno-thriller will become available nearly a month earlier on September 6.

"Brown is famous for diving into the past, connecting it to the present. I'll be showing readers what the near-future might look like via social and political landscapes, including lots of fascinating technology. Several story elements from the book have come out in the media since it was first written as a screenplay nearly two years ago. Won't it be interesting to see how many more plot points come true?"

Not without plenty of twists and turns, Horner's writing style is to dive more deeply into the characters' personal lives amping up the drama. She goes on to say, "There is a huge surprise ending concerning the protagonist's identity that may shock readers. Even I was surprised when it occurred to me halfway through the book. It was as if she told me this is who she is. That's the magic inherent in writing. It's the writer who is the muse, merely the scribe taking dictation from the Universe."

But, Horner realizes it takes many villages to create a bestseller. She is asking Dayton area residents to help turn the author's debut novel into a sensation in exchange for a free eBook copy for their reading device or computer. The first 50 readers to post an Amazon.com review when the book publishes will also receive a signed hardcover or paperback edition of the book.

"Stop by the website to say hello and introduce yourself. I'd love to meet you and hear what you think about the book and our future in general. We're in this together. Let's make it a good one."

Christine is a 2014 Dayton Literary Peace Prize nominated author for nonfiction and has written a children's book about the everyday heroes that walk among us dedicated to her daughter who is a cancer survivor. To visit the website and download your free copy, please visit:
